Dear fellow collectors,

We are delighted to present the second paper money auction of the year. After the success of our last edition in June, we have decided to make the paper money auction a biennial tradition.

Unlike other auction this one takes place at our office in the Schulman gallery on Jan Luijkenstraat 94 in Amsterdam. As this is a closed auction and by invitation, it will be a more intimate setting, which of course is accompanied by hors-d'oeuvre, and a glass of wine. Essentially a Thursday night drink with impressive auction attached to it.

The catalogue offers a varied and exciting selection of paper money. A striking piece that we are allowed to trade is a 10 rigsdaler note, issued in 1768 by the Danish Courant Bank. This special object tells us the story of the paper money destruction that took place in Copenhagen between 1813 and 1815, after many Danes were plunged into great economic misery due to the skyrocketing inflation during Napoleonic Wars. As far as we know, the copy we offered is the only 10 rigsbankdaler note from the year 1768 that survived this major event. We can also present an interesting selection of Dutch and Dutch East Indies banknotes, including a rare Indian NICA specimen set from 1943 and a 500 guilder 'Hollandia' and 20 guilder 'Boerhaave' in absolute top quality.

As always to my fellow collectors, Happy hunting!

Beste medeverzamelaars,

Het verheugt ons dat wij de tweede papierveiling van het jaar mogen presenteren. Na het succes van onze afgelopen editie in juni, hebben wij ons voorgenomen om van de papiergeldveiling een traditie te maken die twee keer per jaar terugkeert.

Deze veiling vindt plaats bij ons op kantoor in de Schulman galerie aan de Jan Luijkenstraat 94 in Amsterdam. Omdat dit een gesloten veiling is en op uitnodiging, zal het een meer intieme setting zijn, die natuurlijk gepaard gaat met hors-d'oeuvre, en een glas wijn. In wezen een donderdagavondborrel met indrukwekkende veiling eraan verbonden.

Deze catalogus biedt een wisselende maar spannende verscheidenheid aan bankpapier. Een opvallend stuk dat wij mogen verhandeld, is een 10 rigsdaler biljet, uitgegeven in 1768 door de Deense Courant Bank. Dit bijzondere object vertelt ons onze het verhaal over de papiergeldvernietiging die tussen 1813 en 1815 in Kopenhagen heeft plaatsgevonden, nadat vele Denen door de torenhoge inflatie tijdens Napoleonistische oorlogen in grote economische ellende waren gestort. Zover we weten, is het door ons aangeboden exemplaar het enige 10 rigsbankdalerbiljet uit het jaar 1768 dat deze ingrijpende gebeurtenis heeft overleefd. Eveneens mogen wij ook weer een interessante sortering aan Nederlands en Nederlands Indische biljetten presenteren, waarbij onder andere een zeldzame Indische NICA specimen set uit 1943 en een 500 gulden 'Hollandia' en 20 gulden 'Boerhaave' in absolute topkwaliteit.

5 Francs. 1914-1921. 3.6.1920. Black on pale underprint. Woman seated with child by beehive at left. Back: elephant and hippo at center. KINSHASA. P. 4b. While the 1942 and the 1943-1947 reprint of the 1914-1921 series appear on the market frequently, the first issue is a lot of scarcer and is usually encountered in much lower grades. This particular example has a clean appearance, with only a sharp centerfold and minor creases. Bright black and white colors and eye-catching details are found on this example, and it would be a great challenge to find a more appealing note than the one offered at Schulman today.

To keep pace with the rapid economic and trade developments of Belgian Congo, the Bank of Belgium had to increase the circulation of 5 Franc notes in 1909 to prevent an acute cash shortage. This recourse to Belgian banknotes soon proved to be inadequate, however, and, after negotiations, an agreement was concluded between the Bank of Belgium and the Banque du Congo Belge, which granted to the latter authorization to issue its own paper currency. In October 1912, the Banque du Congo Belge commissioned the Berlin Reichsdruckerei to print 5 Francs bills for all its four branches of- Elizabethville, Matadi, Kinshasa and Stanleyville respectively. The issuing of these state paper currency met with very little success among the local populace. Due to humidity and insects, the notes rapidly decomposed and as a result, they could not be reused. Moreover, local tribes put little confidence in state bills with an unknown signature, having greater trust in foreign coins such Maria Theresia thalers or zinc coins struck by a religious community known as the Peres Blancs. In response to this public mistrust, the Banque du Congo immediately began to phase out and replace these foreign metal currencies, but this imposition of paper money on the Congolese people merely helped to increase public wariness towards banknotes which did not become a stable of the Congolese economy until the late 1950s. Since a lot of 5 francs deteriorated so quickly, examples of this note above very fine + are essentially non-existent. The note on offer at Schulman today displays almost no folds and exceptional details, and collectors would be pressed to find a superior example to rival this piece.

During the early years of independence, Botswana mostly used the South African Rand. In 1976, however, the first Pula notes were born and the rand ceased to be legal tender. The Botswana specimen set from 1982, which was gifted to bank staff and foreign dignitaries, represented a lot of money at the time, considering that the Botswanan economy was not particularly cash hungry during the 1980s. This set is still somewhat of a sleeper in the market, and rarely comes up for sale in uncirculated grades. All notes are almost pack fresh, perfectly centered and brightly colored. A chance for the advanced note collector to obtain a true African rarity.

Despite the fact that the economy of Denmark hinged on a bullion standard throughout second half of the eighteenth century, the use of paper money as convertible fiduciary notes was relatively high compared to other European nations during this time period. This transactional use would come to a screeching halt, however, during the period of the Napoleonic wars which was accompanied by raging inflation. The economic situation deteriorated so rapidly that by 1812 paper currency had dropped one-fourteenth of its face value. Although some effort was made by the Danish government to stem inflation by increased taxation, this method proved not to be entirely effective. Because of the prospect of the collapse of paper currency, speculation in foreign currency increased dramatically, and attempts to stop it were scarcely successful. Indeed, even key members of Danish government indulged in it. As a consequence, king Frederik VI would proclaim the bankruptcy of Denmark on 5 January 1813. The Kurantbank was closed and would be replaced by the Rigsbank, and all paper money was called in to be exchanged. Without any form of numismatic diligence, almost all banknotes issued by the Kurantbank were withdrawn and destroyed. The 10 Rigsdaler Courant on offer at Schulman somehow managed evaded this period of economic turmoil, thus making it a truly remarkable survivor, probably being only the note from its year of issue that has escaped monetary reform.

A scarce piece from the first emission of the State of Ethiopia which opened its doors in 1945. This particular emission was printed on the birthday of emperor Haile Selassie, and was intended as a introduction of the Abyssinian people to a new currency, the Ethiopian dollar. During this period, Ethiopians still generally shunned the use of banknotes, preferring the silver Maria Theresia Thaler which were circulating simultaneously. These coins, were, however, phased out by the State Bank in 1946 in a bid to persuade young Ethiopians to make more use of paper currency.

Issued in 1963, this note was the second highest denomination from what would be last series from the Bank of Libya. It circulated until 1971, a year which would signal the end of the pound and mark the dawn of the Libyan dinar. It all came to pass when the reign of king Idris I was overthrown by a small group of army officers who resented his socially conservative policies and were disappointed by his religiously fundamentalist attitude towards the growing political current of Arab nationalism. This bloodless coup d'etat was staged by the now infamous Muammar Gaddafi who became the de-facto leader of Libya for more than four decades until he was ousted by a revolt in August 2011.

On the 6th of March, 1946, the banknotes that were issued by the Bank of Java before the Second War officially lost their status as legal tender. In the areas that were reasserted under Dutch control (including Hollandia, Biak, Morotai, Balikpapan, and Tarakan) circulation officially consisted solely of the so-called NICA (Netherlands Indies Civil Administration) series. Specimens of this particular emission - issued under the Royal Decree of March 2 1943 - were printed in the United States by the American Banknote Company and were directly commissioned by the Dutch government-in-exile in London, who assumed that Bank of Java would be in no position to fully perform all of its duties after the conclusion of the war. In August 1945, these trial notes were first transferred from the United States to Australia, from where they were shipped to the Netherlands East Indies in order to be distributed among high-ranking officials, bank staff and visiting dignitaries. Despite their very distinguishable visual style, which was praised by many Dutch art critics at the time, the specimens of NICA series were not well-liked by colonials. For one thing, these trial notes were scorned by the board members of the Bank of Java who were seething to learn that their institution was deprived of its right to issue paper currency. In their view, the Bank of Java had suffered much less from the consequences of the Second War than the government-in-exile had presumed, since it had retained the core of its staff as well as its administration, archives, and printing equipment. Although the monopoly on note issuance was returned to the Bank of Java in 1947, the decision of the Dutch government to put all banking operations under its direct supervision, created a deep sense of discontent among Dutch Indian Bankiers and the colonial authorities. In addition, the specimens were poorly received by the revolutionary government of Indonesia, which combatted Dutch colonial authorities. Not only did these intensively dislike the engraving of queen Wilhelmina on the front of the new notes, but they also felt the exchange rate that was offered by the Dutch colonial government for Japanese occupational currency, was too low. As a result, NICA specimen sets that came into hands of Indonesian revolutionaries were immediately destroyed and Japanese occupational bills still remained in circulation in Indonesian society even after NICA bills were officially introduced. It was not until after the end of the Dutch colonial empire, that the NICA specimen set gradually acquired numismatic and historical interest. Today at Schulman, collectors will have the rare opportunity to acquire the entire set, except for the 500 gulden. Usually these notes, especially in superior grades, are piecemealed out, leaving paper currency specialists to hunt for years to complete their set. For the collector of top-tier Netherlands Indies 'banknotes, this is therefore an outstanding opportunity that should not be passed up.

An underrated type of this lower denomination, bearing the Clegg signature from the second issue of South African Reserve Bank. The most noticeable difference between this emission and the examples that were printed after 1927, is the inclusion of the Dutch term 'Zuidafrikaanse' instead of 'Suidafrikaanse' in Afrikaans. With rise of pro-Afrikaner sentiment, this phrasing would be changed. This makes the 1926 issue of the 1 pound note a true South African rarity, one that should not be underestimated for its size.

Economists still debate why inflation in Zimbabwe went out of reasonable control within a period a three months (August 2008 - November 2008). While political upheaval and the lack of faith and confidence in Zimbabwe's currency were certainly contributing factors in the inflationary process, the economic behavior of the Zimbabwean people in the time of such economic downfall is still a subject-matter that is largely unresolved. The introduction of 100 trillion dollar note was certainly the grimmest and most desperate measure of the Zimbabwean government to bring hyperinflation to a halt. However, this note only circulated for a few months before the reserve bank in Harare decided to abandon the printing of the Zimbabwean dollar altogether. As a result, the American dollar and the South African rand became the standard currency of exchange in most supermarkets in 2009 which left Zimbabwean people without access to foreign money in dire states.

II. Algemeen

1. Deze voorwaarden gelden bij iedere verkoop van Goederen door de Veilinghouder aan de Hoogste Bieder en sluiten alle andere voorwaarden aangeduid of aangeboden door de Hoogste Bieder uit, zowel in de onderhandelingsfase als in ieder ander stadium van de verkoop, tenzij de Hoogste Bieder uitdrukkelijk op schrift verklaart aanvullende voorwaarden te vragen en deze door de Veilinghouder voorafgaand aan de veiling schriftelijk zijn geaccepteerd.
